Let Us Raise Voice to Save the War displaced Filipino Japanese people

As Japan remembers the war dead on the 73rd anniversary of the end of the Pacific War, there is unsolved issues: to save the War Displaced Filipino Japanese People. They are children of Japanese immigrants who migrated to the Philippines from late 19th up to the end of WWII. Before the war, the number of Japanese immigrants in the Philippines reached 30,000 in the highest stage of development.

As the Philippines became the center of the battlefield, they were forced to be separated from Japanese fathers or family due to the turmoil of the war. Even if they survived, male Japanese immigrants were repatriated while their Filipina wife and kids were left behind in the Philippines.

After the war, most of them were continuously persecuted by the Philippines community as children of hostile national. They hid Japanese identity to survive. Applicable laws in Philippines and Japan state that those, whose father is a citizen of Japanese, is Japanese national. Thus, 2nd generation should be recognized as Japanese by rights. However, many of them still don't have been registered in Japanese Family Register, Koseki. Practically, they are stateless persons. Now, these war-displaced people are seeking to recover their identities as Japanese nationals.

Total number of 2nd generation who have not recovered Japanese identity

1,177

(2,625 including those who have already passed away)

The Article 15 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights states that everyone has the right to a nationality. As the government of Philippines ratified the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless persons, it is dedicated to support stateless people including the Japanese descendant.

It is Japanese government's time to take an action

There is little time left, but it is not too late to save the displaced Japanese. Japanese and Chinese government have been supporting Japanese orphan left in China. Thus, we hereby request urgent actions of Japanese government to recover the identities of the 2nd generations.
